'ROUND 'N' 'ROUND

The postoffice department announced recently that all letters, addressed to these "believe it or not" cartoonists, that are not addressed properly, will be thrown into the dead letter department.

* * * *

Since the craze has struck the United States, thousands of fans have been sending letters to the artists, addressed with signs and symbols.

* * * *

One fan sent a letter to Ripley and the only address on the face of the envelope was a bunch of rippling lines.

* * * *

Another sent a letter to another artist, addressed in the deaf and dumb hand-language with pictures of the hands held in the method that forms letters, drawn upon the envelope.

* * * *

Another fan wrote the address upon the back of a postage stamp and sent it.

* * * *

That is all very well for the publicity hounds who send in the letters, but—

* * * *

Think of the poor postal clerks who have one whale of a time trying to figure out the American public handwriting, and to cap the climax are given a cross word puzzle to solve before a letter is sent.

Too much is too much.

* * * *

There is one thing worse than having a cold.

* * * *

That's having two colds.

* * * *

The Carnera boom is fading away. Before long the fans will have forgotten the Italian man-mountain and his ballyhoo.

* * * *

But boxing fans in this vicinity will never forget that bout in Oakland.

* * * *

Bobbie Jones is headed for dear old England. Bobbie must win the British open championship again — his public demands it.

* * * *

It must be terrible to be a popular hero.

* * * *

Babe Ruth's admirers demand that he should break his home run record this year.

* * * *

Lindy's public demands that he travel in mysterious ways as of yore, breaking more aerial records.

* * * *

And Bobby Jones' public demands that he capture the British and American championships.

* * * *

Yes, it MUST be a hard job to be a hero.

TEXAS CITIES STRUCK BY STORM

By UNITED PRESS

The perils of the prairies—tornadoes and cyclonic winds, swept sections of the southwest late Tuesday, centering destruction in Texas communities which tonight counted between 30 and 40 dead, scores of injured and unestimated property loss.

A tornado swept along the gulf coast spending its force on the little town of Nordheim, Tex., where it was reported more than 20 persons were left dead. Forty were known to have been injured in that section.

The rural community of Frost, about 50 miles southeast of Dallas was cut off from the world after a tornado had levelled business and residential districts. It was followed by a fire which burned parts of the stricken town despite a heavy downpour of rain.

Unconfirmed reports placed the probable death list at Frost at around 15, although earlier reports indicated the death list might be increased.

Medical aid and troops were rushed to this stricken and fire-swept community harboring 1200 persons.

Nine bodies were brought from Frost to Hillsboro nearby tonight Seven others, recovered from wreckage of homes, near Maloney and Bynum, Tex., in the Frost area, were taken to undertaking establishments. The injured totaled between 25 and 30.

MAN FACES SANITY CHARGE

CONCORD, May 6.—Diong T. Augustin, 34, a Filipino laborer has peculiar ideas as to how one should go about weighing oneself.

And because of his peculiar ideas as to the proper or improper methods of weighing oneself, Augustin is today facing charges of insanity.

According to Constable John Ott, Augustin stepped up to a penny scale in front of a business establishment today and carefully diverted himself of his coat.

Following closely upon the removal of his coat, Augustin removed his vest and finally his shoes.

He then stepped gingerly upon the scales, apparently with the intentions of weighing himself.

As Otto started across the street with the intention of investigating, Augustin is said to have jumped from the scales, hauled a revolver from his hip pocket, and running to the middle of the street uttered a war whoop that would have done credit to America's first inhabitants, and fired a shot into the air.

He then, according to Ott, dropped the revolver in the middle of the street, and apparently oblivious to anything else, stepped back on the scales.

At this time Ott placed him under custody, and declared Augustin would be charged with insanity.

The seven policemen were injured, two seriously, when a mob stoned and wrecked a police car returning from protecting a pump station.

Mobs Gather

Mobs gathered in the center of the city later in the day, and 50 were injured in the Kotwal, or police headquarters, and at Chandni Chowk, a public square. They began spasmodically attacking the police patrols, and the patrolmen occasionally were forced to fire in self defense.

The situation, although controlled, was distinctly serious as hostile mobs and processions paraded the streets from early morning, threatening shops. Business was at a standstill.

BRITTEN TO RECOMMEND PROGRAM

WASHINGTON, May 6.—UP—A $1,000,000,000 ten-year naval building program to bring the United States to parity with Great Britain was announced today by Chairman Britten of the House Naval Affairs committee, who will propose it to the House in bill form tomorrow.

Britten said his program, designed to cover American needs under the London treaty, calls for building of 150,000 tons of new destroyers, 73,500 tons of six-inch gun cruisers, 69,000 tons of aircraftcarriers and 52,700 tons of submarines.

Britten's announcement came on the eve of two other important prases of the naval situation—the introduction of the new naval appropriations bill and the Senate Foreign Relations committee's first hearing on the London treaty.

Large Fund

Britten's program contemplates a large expenditure of money, but the bill follows rather closely to President Hoover's anticipations. The president in announcing the terms of the treaty and explaining them on April 11 said:

"The cost to the United States of replacements and new construction during the next six years until the further conference will be—under various estimates—from $550,000,000 to $650,000,000 as compared to a sum of between $1,400,000 to $1,640,000 to attain parity on the Geneva basis.

"In addition to this saving, the reduction in maintenance and operation costs would bring the saving to a total of $1,000,000,000, the president calculated.

New Cruisers

It was noted also that Britten's program provides for a number of six-inch gun cruisers, adoption of which in the London treaty has been cited as a new departure in modern American naval policy. Hitherto 10 000-ton eight-inch gun cruisers were held necessary for protection.

Senator Robinson, Dem., Ark., one of the American delegates at London, will explain the treaty to the foreign relations committee tomorrow, Secretary of State Stimson's appearance having been postponed.

GREEN VALLEY DISPUTE ENDS

MARTINEZ, May 6. —When Superior Judge A. B. McKenzie today failed to sustain an injunction plea of William Short, of Green Valley, who sought a court order restraining School Superintendent William H. Hanlon from declaring the consolidation of Green Valley and Danville school districts complete, the dispute was over and the legality of the merger came to an end.

In making his decision, Judge McKenzie ruled that the law does not require signers on a petition for consolidation, to be heads of families with children in the affected schools.

Judge McKenzie, in refusing to sustain the injunction, brought to an end a controversy that has run rampant in to districts, and culminated in the arrest of two men who were charged with illegal voting.

The consolidation will bring out the resignation of present school trustees of the districts and the appointment of a new body by Hanlon.

Maxie Given Welcome To U. S. By Board

NEW YORK, May 6.—UP—The return of the Prodigal Son was never like this!

New York State, represented by its boxing fathers, not only welcomed Max Schmeling back into the fold as a duly accredited heavyweight contender today, but took steps to make sure that the German does all his fighting right here for the next year or more.

Schmeling, under suspension here since he refused to fight Phil Scott last summer, went rather diffidently before the commission to seek reinstatement which would enable him to meet Jack Sharkey at Yankee stadium, June 12.

It was just a formality, for every one knew what the answer would be. The commission's surprise move was to tell Maxie if he wanted a license to fight Sharkey for the heavyweight championship he must agree to defend the title here within a year, in the event of his winning it.

Maxie said he would agree.

The agreement was purely verbal and just why the New York Boxing Commission, which suspended Schmeling for breaking a written contract to meet Scott, should be satisfied with a verbal agreement with the German is not clear.

Nor, for that matter, is it clear just what right the commission has to dictate to Maxie where he shall fight in case he wins the championship.

The commission went even farther and reserved the right to approve Schmeling's opponent in the event that Max becomes recognized world's champion.

As title holder, Schmeling is going to be worth a lot of money to Madison Square Garden, which is the power behind the throne, to New York city and its boxing commission and everyone else concerned. Hence the rather unusual provision in Maxie's reinstatement.

Angels Lead In League With Win Over Missions

SAN FRANCISCO, May 6.—UP—The Los Angeles Angels recaptured leadership of the Pacific Coast league today by scoring in six of the nine innings to beat the San Francisco Missions, 16 to 13, here.

The victory gave the Angels a percentage of .615 and Oakland was tied with Sacramento for second place, each having a percentage of .607 after the Oaks had trimmed the Senators, 7 to 1.Pete Daghlia was on the mound for Oakland and allowed only five scattered hits by the team that had been in first place, one of them being a homer by Hoag.

Overcoming an early lead by Hollywood, the San Francisco Seals strengthened their hold on fourth place with a 9 to 3 victory.

Purnell Hits 2 Homers With Bases Loaded

PRINCETON, N. J., May 6.—UP—Stanley Purnell, of Baltimore, second baseman of the Princeton freshman baseball team, performed baseball's rarest stunt, when he hit two home runs, with the bases full each time, in the sixth inning of today's game with Hun school.

Purnell's first homer was made with one out, accounting for the first runs of his team's 13 run rally which gave them a 17 to 4 victory. Coming to bat a second time in the inning with two out and the same runners on base, Purnell drove out his second consecutive homer.

High Net Men Will Meet In Tennis Tourney

The net squad of Richmond Union high school will participate in the first tennis meet of the Alameda County Athletic league season Saturday at Berkeley. Other league teams competing are Berkeley, Alameda and Piedmont high schools.

The local tennis athletes have been showing a spectacular brand of tennis playing in pre-season contests this year. They have won two tournaments thus far and lost one. Their single defeat was administered by the more experienced freshmen athletes of the University of California. The college boys afterwards congratulated the Richmond boys for their exceptional style of playing. If pre-season records mean anything, the Richmond Union high school net outfit should go far in A. C. A. L. competition.

However, the high schools of Berkeley, Piedmont, and Alameda also boast of superiority in the sport of tennis, and Saturday's league meet is expected to offer some of the strongest tennis competition yet offered by high school tennis players of the eastbay.

The Richmond team is directed by Clifford Fallon. The members of the local team are: Melvin Avilla, Darrow Sutton, Phil Carlin, and Adrian Newman.

High Nine To Meet Cadets

The Richmond Union high school varsity nine will travel to San Rafael today to clash with the San Rafael Military Academy aggregation on the Academy field.

Today's game will end the baseball season of Richmond Union high school for 1930. The Richmond boys met with a medium amount of success in their first year in the Alameda County Athletic league, finishing in a tie with Berkeley high school for third place. They are therefore reckoned capable of handling themselves on the San Rafael diamond today. However, the Richmond players will probably not return victorious without a hard battle, for the San Rafael Cadets captured the California private school championship this year.

Either Lemon, Babich, or Bono will twirl for the Richmond Union high school squad today. Rosano will receive for Richmond.

The local nine is now being coached by Joe Viano, as Ivan Hill, head athletic coach at Richmond Union high school, is occupied with spring football practice.

S. O. LEAGUE WILL OPEN TODAY

Richmond baseball fans who have been waiting two years for the Richmond Standard Oil Twilight baseball league to resume activities will at last be rewarded tonight when the league season of 1930 gets under way on the First street diamond.

The first ball of this year's league will be pitched by R. T. Osborn, manager of the local refinery, and it will be caught by Francis Smith, superintendent of the refinery.

The four league teams—Mechanics, Refinery, All-Standards, and Barrel House will be present on the field at tonight's ceremonies. Music will be furnished by F. C. Bibbins' band. The flag will be presented by the Richmond Boy Scouts. The ceremonies will start at 4:40 o'clock, and will be followed by the first game of the season at five o'clock.

The teams playing in tonight's contest are the Mechanics and Refinery. Wolfram will occupy the box for the Refinery, while Schmidt will twirl for the Mechanics. Armentrout will receive for the Refinery, and Kogler will perform behind home plate for the Mechanics. The game will be refereed by Snike Elder and Rod Allen.

Popular demand has been the cause of the revival of the Standard Oil Twilight league. After a silence of two years, the Standard Oil athletes will be warmly welcomed at the First Street lot tonight.

The lineups of the Mechanics and Refinery in tonight's opening clash are as follows:

MECHANICS

Pitchers—Kersten, Schmidt, Kogler, Carlson.

Catchers—Soby and Kogler.

Infielders — Ellison, O'Rourke, Carson and Gregory.

Outfielders — Gosney, Bonham, Arlett, Dolan and Loveland.

REFINERY

Pitchers—Wolfram, Peacock, Cantua Sanberg, Yool, Hood and Deardorff.

Catchers—Bertoli and Armentrout.

Infielders — Zimmerman, Bartram, Lamarra and Autry.

Outfielders—Lane, Johnson and Campbell.

No machines will be allowed to park at the Nevin entrance to the First street grounds during the league games, due to the fine condition of the turf in that locality.

TALKING COMEDY — "THE WIFE'S BIRTHDAY"

Buy A Scrip Book For Mother!

ZANE GREY'S WESTERN HERE

At last Zane Grey's thrilling characters step from the pages of his popular novels onto the screen—and talk. Paramount has made the long awaited entertainment treat a reality and Grey's wonder tale of outlawry on the Western frontier, "The Light of Western Stars," will show at the Fox-California theater, starting tomorrow for two days.

"The Light of Western Stars" is like a page torn from the gripping life story of the West. It pictures, in scene and dialogue, the last desperate stand of banded lawlessness on the American frontier. Otto Brower, maker of two great silent Westerns, "Sunset Pass" and "Avalanche," and himself a product of the cattle ranges and plain country, directed this picture.

"The Light of Western Stars" brings Richard Arlen forward in his second Western role. Again, as in "The Virginian" he is at greatest advantage in this action-drama of the outdoors. And Mary Brian, the leading lady of "The Virginian," seen recently opposite Arlen in "Burning Up" is the sweetheart.

This first Zane Grey thriller to be filmed with dialogue has an unusually strong supporting cast, including Harry Green, funny man of "Close Harmony" and "Kibitzer" Fred Kohler, seen opposite George Bancroft in many of that star's great hits; Regis Toomey of "Alibi" and "Street of Chance" fame, and many others.

Arlen plays the part of Dick Bailey, battling man of the West, who seeks to capture the heart of Mary Brian with cave-man tactics and meets with a romantic stampede. Then he changes his tactics, with more success. The story is filled with adventure and danger, and spectacular scenes, familiar in the West a few years ago, are daringly filmed. Each minutest detail is authentically correct. "The Light of Western Stars" is not only a rousing entertainment, it is an important record of the defiant spirit of the American pioneers.

Also on the program is a talking comedy "The Wife's Birthday."

OFFER OF U.S. JUDGESHIP TOLD

WASHINGTON, May 6. —UP— The Senate in an open "Grand Jury" session today found that "a gentleman from the State of Washington" suggested to Senator Dill, Dem., Wash., that the administration was so anxious to secure confirmation of the Supreme Court nomination of John J. Parker that Dill might be rewarded with a federal judgeship or "almost anything" he wanted for supporting him.

Dill offered this explanation on of the Parker debate, and Republi the floor, during the seventh day can Floor Leader Watson immediately claimed it exonerated President Hoover and Parker himself.

After discussion of a situation believed unprecedented in open history, the Senate dropped the proposal of Watson and other Parker supporter sfor an investigation of the circumstances of the offer and agreed to vote on the Parker confirmation at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Probe Seen

Parker is believed beaten, but the vote will be very close. Senator Norris, Repn. Neb., prevented a vote today, because of the absence of the two Wisconsin Senators and other Parker opponents.

Senator Ashurst, Dem., Ariz., who made a charge of administration offers of judgeships to gain votes in the bitter contest yesterday, was the one who brought Dill into the Senate's tense discussion today, and at the end he made the claim that his charges were upheld.

Record Corrected

He corrected the record, however to read "a federal judgeship" was offered instead of the plural "judgeships" which he stated in his original charge.

Dill gave a full report of his conversation with the mysterious and zealous "gentlemen from Washington," and Senator Bratton, Dem N. M., who heard the conversation said it was exact. He did not disclose the "gentleman's" name, however and the Senate's failure to investigate indicates this will remain a secret unless the lobbyist in question steps forward.

Parker entered the controversy again today, sending his third message defending himself from reports printed this morning that Ashurst said the offers of judgeships were made with his consent.

Statement Untrue

This statement "is absolutely untrue, and I resent it as an attack upon my character," Parker said in a telegram read by Senator Fess, Repn.

Dill, speaking in a flustered, husky voice, told the Senate he was amused with the "offer" 'of "almost anythigh" and "tried to draw him out."

"He told me I would be rewarded with anything that I wanted," Dill said.

Tells Story

"I told him the trouble was that I did not want anything.

"He said: 'Well, judgeships are always open.'

"I told him I would rather be a private citizen than a judge when I retired.

"I did not at any time consider it as a challenge to my integrity. I did not think it would justify anything serious being said about it."

The Girl Said No

PHYLLIS CRANE, Clara Blandick and William Haines in a scene from "The Girl Said No" which is being shown at the Fox-California theater.

Starring In Rio Rita

ROBERT WOOLSEY, is one of the featured players in "Rio Rita," which is now being shown at the Richmond Theater.

BILL HAINES MAKES HIT IN FILM

"The Girl Said No" William Haines' latest talking vehicle which closes tonight at the Fox-California theater, shows his fans a bit of the old and a bit of a new comedian. For besides the whimsical Haines tricks of laughmaking there is a transition and he grows up from the irrepressible boy to a man, seasoned by responsibility and struggle.

The picture picks Haines up as he leaves college with a diploma and shows how the "University of Hard Knocks" changes the hero from an inexperienced boy to a man facing the world of work, struggle and competition. It is an echo of the experience of every youth in the land crossing to manhood.

The first part of the picture shows Haines in a hilarious series of comedy situations, then his father dies and he has to take on the responsibility of the family. His first job, getting fired, and other poignant bits of drama call for some remarkably fine acting, and in between are his nonsensicalities.

Sam Wood directed the new Metro Goldwyn Mayer comedy and kept it moving with lightning speed. Striking realism is contained in the roaring Wall Street brokerage in full operation, and poignant heart interest in the intimate details of family life, while roaring comedy attends the escape from the wedding, the auto elopement that winds up with a surprise and the night club adventure.

Leila Hyams, who played opposite the star in "Alias Jimmy Valentine," appears as the heroine of the new picture, and Francis X. Bushman, Jr., plays the villain as the office manager. Haines' parents are played in exceptionally fine character work by William V. Mong and Clara Blandick, while the "kid brother" is enacted by Junor Coghlan; Phyllis Crane and William Janney appear as younger brother and sister to Haines. Haines is assisted in the comedy situations by that star pair of funmakers, Marie Dressler and Polly Moran.

Also on the program is a talking comedy "Black Narcissus."

Movie Stars Fete Late Valentino

HOLLYWOOD(May 6,—(UP)—Motion picture celebrities who have not forgotten the screen greatness of the late Rudolph Valentino, gathered in DeLongprey Park today on the 35th anniversary of his birthday to assist in the unveiling of a memorial statue.

Named "Aspiration," the statue symbolizes the art of the man whose acting had made him the idol of the American public even after he had died suddenly of appendicitis.

Promptly at noon, Dolores Del Rio, Mexican film star, drew back a velvet curtain, revealing the bronze figure of a man with face uplifted. About here were many other famous screen personages, many still in makeup, and taking a few brief moments away from the studios.

The statue was presented by friends and admirers of Valentino in all walks of life, and from all parts of the world.

3 LOCAL BOYS WILL RECEIVE DEGREES

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE, May 6.—When the sixty-seventh commencement exercises of Saint Mary's college take place next week on the Moraga valley campus, three graduates of Richmond high school will receive their degrees. They are: Carroll Pitchford, Theodore Malianni and Fred W. ePtrich.

Pitchford has been prominent in both thletics and scholarship since his entrance at St. Mary's. Last year he captained the basketball team and won the Dwyer award for being the most valuable man on the Gael's football team. He was president of the Big M society, honor athletic club on the St. Mary's campus. Pitchford has also achieved an enviable record of scholarship, specializing in diplomacy and the study of the foreign service in the school of arts and letters. His thesis, "Louis Napoleon as a Diplomat" is preparation for a further study in diplomacy in Washington, D. C., which the young graduate plans to complete after his graduation.

Fred W. Petrich, of Giant, also a graduate of Richmond high school will receive his Bachelor of Science degree in commerce Sunday with his former school mates. Petrich's thesis, "The Production of Standard Oil Products at Richmond" is the result of both theoretical and practical experience at the big Richmond plant.

Theodore Malianni is the third Richmond boy to graduate from St. Mary's this year. He has been prominent in social, literary and musical circles at the college since his entrance. This cultural tendency is reflected in his thesis: "Twentieth Century American Poetry."

Other Contra Costa boys in this year's graduating class are Edward Smith of Port Costa, George Ackerman of Antioch and William De Lacy and William R. Johnston of Martinez. Altogether, 60 men will receive their degrees.

Most Reverend Archbishop Edward J. Hanna of San Francisco will deliver the address to the graduates, while Leonard A. Thomas of San Anselmo and Edward Smiddy of San Francisco are the student valedictorians. Musical selections by the glee club and band under the direction of Father Meehan are other features on an interesting program.

The honorary degree of Doctor of Laws will be conferred Monsignor Gleason pastor of St. Francis de Sales Church, Oakland. Medals for engineering, journalism, Christian doctrine, philosophy, oratory and exceptional scholarship will also be awarded at the graduation exercises.

"Fighting Bob" Starts Serving Jail Sentence

LOS ANGELES, May 6.—(UP)—A self-styled prisoner of war, the Rev. Robert P. "Fighting Bob" Schuler spent the first of 20 days in the county jail today entertaining newspapermen in his cell.

The minister was found guilty of contempt of court as the result of radio sermons in which he criticized two superior court judges and must pay $100 fine in addition to spending the 20 days in jail.

"My fight against evil influences is merely halted," he said. "I expect it to be delayed for the full 20 days, too, because I do not want a parole.

"While I am here I intend to write a story of my imprisonment and when I get out I will know all there is to know about Sheriff Traeger's bastile."

With other prisoners he swept out his cell, polished the bars, made the bed, and "policed" up his belongings.

Rev. Schuler criticized in his radio talk the handling of Julian Petroleum cases by Judges Marshall McComb and Walton Wood.

Forest Fires More Deadly Than Hunters

OKANOGAN, Wash.—While hunters in the Chelan national forest were killing 250 deer last year, forest fires killed 450, rangers estimated. Of that number, cougars killed 350 and coyotes killed 100.

Despite the slaughter, fur-bearing animals of all kind are increasing, according to a government census.

Rangers reported the number of animals in the forest approximately as follows:

Balck or brown bear, 900; silvertip bear 3; mule deer, 3700; whitetail deer, 15; mountain goats, 1200; coyotes 1500; wildcats, 300; mountain lion 13; wolf, 4; beaver, 2500; fox, 40; porcupine, 300; otter 200; skunk 2500; weasel 4000; coon, 100; muskrat, 3000.

Eagles also took a toll of the animal life in the forest, the report said, having carried off about 25 kids, while cougars were blamed for killing 100 goats.

MANY INJURED IN INDIAN RIOTING

infantry were held in readiness to reinforce the police.

The authorities sought to pacify the natives. The district magistrate and the superintendent of police, in two cars, went unarmed to see the Hindu leaders. They were heavily stoned and had to return.

All the attacks against police have been made by low caste Hindus.

POLICE FIREE UPON REBELS

CALCUTTA, India, May 6.—(UP)—Two British police sergeants were injured during one or four clashes between the police and the rioting natives in Calcutta, and vicinity today.

Six constables were hurt during the same encounter. Calcutta until today had been comparitively quiet, although unrest had spread during Mahatma Ghandi's civil disobedience campaign in recent weeks. Arrests today numbered 50.

The clash in which the Britons were injured occurred at Panchanretolla, two miles from Howrah, across the Hugli river from Calcutta. Sergeant Lewis was knocked senseless while trying to quiet an unruly mob.

Sergeant Brown warned the crowd to disperse. He then ordered the constables to fire, and 16 rioters were injured.

The incident occurred when the police sought to prevent a mob from derailing a street car near Howrah.

The city was patrolled tonight by armored cars which ran thru the streets. Warnings were issued against demonstrations tomorrow.

Attack On Berman Hinted In Charge Against Reporter

LOS ANGELES, May 6.—UP—The grand jury's action in returning an extortion indictment against Morris Lavine, reporter, and Miss Leontine Johnson, private secretary merely was another attempt to whitewash Jacob Berman, former Julian Petroleum corporation executive, the jury was told as their trial neared a close here toay.

Attorneys for Lavine said in final argument that it was Berman's report of the alleged extortion that really led to naming of the pair in the indictment and that it really was Berman and not Lavine or Miss Johnson who plotted to extort money.

Lavine and Miss Johnson, according to the charge against them, demanded money from prominent Los Angeles men in return for not using their names in stories about the Julian Petroleum corporation collapse.

The case will go to the jury tomorrow.

A Wife's Nine Ways to Keep a Husband

NINE rules for husband-keeping just given to the California Federation of Women's Clubs may be summarized thus: Dress prettily for breakfast, don't make him wipe dishes, let him stay at home five nights a week, pay housekeeping bills before buying new clothes, don't ask your mother for Sunday dinner, listen to him talk, always ask his advice, be moderately clinging, make him think you are weak and he is a combination lion-Napoleon. But the compiler of these rules is Miss Jennie Partridge of San Francisco, and mean married women are asking why a "miss" who never even got a husband should be an authority on keeping one! We therefore set down a wife's nine ways for keeping a husband healthy, happy and in love, as follows:

MARGUERITE MOOERS MARSHALL

1. Play fair. Don't hug to yourself the notion that, in becoming a man's wife, you're giving him anything more or anything better than he gives you, that you make greater sacrifices than he, that he must endure without protest your unreasonable exactions and tantrums. If you really feel this way about it, you'd much better remain unmarried.

2. Make a pleasant home environment, where meals are healthful and appetizing and the living room a comfortable place in which to live. If you prefer another job to being cook and housekeeper, then make sure that you have a competent understudy.

3. Reduce nagging to the inescapable minimum, and try to limit it to subjects which involve your husband's well-being rather than your own. He may be peevish when you ask him for the sixth time to go to the oculist and get his glasses changed; but he'll know, underneath, that you mean well and he won't feel the just resentment of the man whose wife nags him to give her a new car which he can't afford.

4. Don't ask questions. Be interested in your husband's affairs but not inquisitive. No man of spirit, however clear his conscience, fails to resent that everlasting conjugal catechism—"Where did you go? With whom? What did you want to do that for? How much money did you spend?" If you are not perpetually curious and suspicious, you'll hear a lot more—and a lot more that's true.

5. Praise him and pay him compliments, instead of "always belittlin'"—always comparing him, to his disadvantage, with the husbands of your friends. When you were engaged it was easy for you to admire his looks and brains—why not continue to give expression to this admiration? A man receives so much discouragement and criticism outside his home that he won't be spoiled by having his wife tell him, now and then, that she thinks he's wonderful.

6. Don't boss. Even the man who allows his wife to order him around, because he wants to keep peace in the house and will do anything for a quiet life, is secretly resentful, rebellious, ready to kick over the traces at the first good opportunity.

7. Let your husband have the friends, the recreations, the social life which he enjoys. If he prefers informal entertaining, don't give formal dinners or drag him to them. If he doesn't care for culture and uplift, don't wish them on him. If he would rather stay at home and read than go to a bridge party, let him. He has the right to amuse himself in his own way—not in yours.

8. Be interesting. Even if you are shut up in the house with the children, even if you are busy with monotonous tasks, try to keep eyes and brain open to human and humorous impressions, try to keep out of the rut of dulness and drudgery. Keep a husband interested in you, and you keep him.

9. Finally, the way to keep a husband is the way to keep any other man—never let him be absolutely and utterly sure of you. Be loyal, be affectionate—but also be surprising and unexpected. Never, never let him be convinced that he can predict with certainty what you will say or do. In short—to keep him, keep him guessing!

ANOTHER TRAGEDY

You are a contributor to a column
And once in a while
Your stuff is used.
You grow rather pompous
As your name appears time after time
In a newspaper with a huge circulation.
You are inclined to think
That you MUST be good.
One day you are seated in the subway
And the girl next to you
Is reading YOUR paper.
You hold your breath while she turns the pages.
Hoping against hope that she will stop
Where YOU begin.
Joy! She IS a reader of THE column.
If she only knew who is sitting so near her!
She is reading YOUR contribution
And you almost burst with excitement.
She turns to her companion and says:
"I don't know who that guy is,
"But he writes the junkiest stuff
"I ever read."

MARTIN PANZER.

Now Maybe Men Won't Go to Sleep in Church!

Women have just won a sixty-two-year-old fight to be admitted to Presbyterian pulpits, although one dissenting clergyman said that "we should put women back in their homes where they belong." His clerical brothers evidently give it up as a bad job!

WINDY NIGHT

Peter says, and I believe him,
There are fairies by his bed
Who are near, and never leave him
Hovering around his head:

And they watch him when it's rainy,
And the wind is shrill and thin,
Chasing every witch and zany
Who is trying to get in.

When the windows shake and rattle,
Then the fairies stand their ground
And they wage a pretty battle,
For the pirates are around.

Peter's castle is defended
In full many a bloody fight—
Oh, how nice to be befriended
In the dark and dead o' night!

It's a Poor Rule That Won't Work Both Ways

Mrs. Lena Lakritz of Detroit, ordered by the court to pay her husband alimony of $3 a week and to buy him a new set of teeth, says that she will fight. Without expressing an opinion on this particular case, we do think that one way to end the abuse of alimony is to apply it without benefit of sex.

A Novel Tray

A RESOURCEFUL housewife found several old pictures in the attic. The frames were the old-fashioned walnut variety. She painted one with red lacquer and another in green as thes were her porch colors. Over the thin wood backing of the green frame she placed heavy metallic paper in green; on this she placed an exquisite cream lace doily, then put on the glass and fastened it all in the green frame on the ends of which she had attached two gilt screen door pulls for handles. She pasted a piece of felt over the back and she has a very handsome tray.

To the red frame she attached black handles and under the glass she placed a sheet of ivory mottled mat stock on the centre of which she put a pretty floral cluster for which she used the French transfers.

A DISH A DAY

By Karen Hollis

When a housewife tires of her duties in the kitchen it is safe to assume that her family is getting pretty bored with her cooking, too. It is high time that she explored a little to find new dishes, and new ways to cook them.

KAREN HOLLIS

Preparing meals for a family can become a deadly routine, or it can be made a new adventure every day. One of the best means of snapping out of routine ways of cooking is to go on an imaginary cooks' tour. Somewhere in the world there are delectable ways of preparing the most ordinary dishes; ways that will interest the housewife in the process itself and tempt the most jaded appetites with the finished product.

If a cook has never explored the Basque country, that should be her first port of call, particularly if she is looking for unusual and savory ways of cooking meats. Even the humble hamburg steak becomes a delicacy when prepared in the Basque manner.

The success of Basque cooking lies in the unusual seasoning, the use of olive oil instead of butter, and very slow cooking. One of their most popular native dishes is this hamburg Basque, which can be cooked in a casserole if you prefer, but which usually is cooked over a slow fire on top of the stove in one of the heavy copper pans so dear to the heart of all French cooks.

HAMBURG BASQUE

2 pounds chopped beef (preferably round steak)
1 egg
½ cup catsup or chili sauce
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
Pinch of dried red pepper
1 small onion
1 can, or 4 tomatoes
1 cup soup stock, or
1 bouillon cube and 1 cup boiling water
½ package noodles
1 cup small mushrooms (canned or fresh)
2 tablespoons olive oil

Beat the egg and add catsup or chili sauce, and salt and ground pepper. Mix in the chopped meat and shape in small cakes, handling lightly so that they will not be toughened by pressing too compactly. Heat the olive oil and brown the onion lightly in it. Add the meat cakes and cook over a hot fire until they are slightly browned on both sides. Then turn the fire very low, add the tomatoes, soup stock, red pepper, noodles, and mushrooms. Simmer gently, turning the meat occasionally, until the noodles are soft.

Finishes for the Skirt Made at Home

By Clarissa Moore

IV.—Seams, Hems and Other Details

LET us learn more of hems and seams and stitches before we proceed to weightier matters. It is such a long step forward to have all these preliminary details thoroughly understood and the knowledge put into practice from the start that it is well worth while to interrupt ourselves now and then to consider them.

We have discussed the plain seam, which is the one most frequently used and is the flattest and easiest to make. It is pressed open and its edges either pinked (picoted) or overcast. In overcasting use a fairly coarse thread or a silk twist and "whip" over the raw edges of the seam fabric, taking care not to have the thread tight enough to draw, that is, to wrinkle or gather.

For jersey or light weight flannel a neat seam finish consists of a series of whipping stitches. That means much the same as overcasting; in fact, it is a form of overcasting, but with stitches taken straight over instead of slantwise, and so close together that they virtually form a cord along the erstwhile raw edges of the cloth.

Felling—we have already discussed the stitched fell—is used for finishing the seams of heavier materials, the flat fell being an admirable method in the case of tailored garments or suiting fabrics, the closely woven ones. First, you stitch the seam up, as for a flat seam, then you press both sides one way, so that one side is atop the other. Now you must cut the under edge evenly away so that it is no more than an eighth of an inch wide. Cut the other, or outer, edge even, turn it toward the other, baste and stitch on the right side about an eighth of an inch from the creased edge and press.

Whatever your material, you now know what type of seam to make and what sort of finish to give it. In making over your one-piece dress into a two-piece suit you probably have not needed to change the shoulder seam nor to juggle with the armsides, but if you should find it necessary to do so, remember that shoulder seams must be turned toward the front; that seams that hold the sleeve into the armhole are never turned over the sleeve, but outward onto the waistpart, and that skirt seams which are not pressed open along with the underarm seams are likewise to be turned toward the front.

Ways of Finishing Hems

French seams are best suited to washable or other sheer materials, but there are several variations of them, so we shall take them up as they are needed. For silks the most satisfactory way of finishing seam edges is to turn in the edges after pressing the seam wide open and machine stitch, or, if the stitching must be done by hand, making them short and even on top and a trifle longer underneath. All the fabrics which show a tendency to fray should be bound with tape as has already been explained.

About hems—they are important. For skirts they should be from three to six inches deep, preferably the latter, to allow for lengthening. Fashion being the changeable creature she is. The proper length is more or less an individual matter, but in any case, to make the hem properly, stand before your mirror and, holding the yardstick upright from the floor, mark the line of desired length all the way round with pins.

Turn the hem at the line of the pins, crease and baste along the edge. Now, using your cardboard gauge, with the mark at the right distance, cut the top edge of your hem evenly so that the hem itself measures the same all the way around, turn the edge over for an eighth or a quarter of an inch and press or stitch on the machine. Baste your hem in place, taking great care that it is smooth. Fullness, if any, may be taken up in little darts. These are tiny plaits that start at a point and end at the top of the hem in a fold.

Now to secure the hem. Use a fine needle, say a ten or a nine, an smooth silk or thread for all but cotton materials. Hold the hem away from you and hem with a slip stitch, sewing the turned-over edge to the body material, taking care that the stitches show on the right side no more than is absolutely necessary. When you come to the little folds or darts, if any, give them an extra stitch or two to make sure they hold fast.

If your skirt, or whatever it happens to be you desire to hem, is not long enough, or large enough, you can face it or give it, as the saying is, a false hem. A facing instead of a hem is advisable, even when there is plenty of material, in the case of circular or semi-circular effects or uneven hemlines.

Bias facings are much used and if the material is cut on a true bias, as it should be, this can be shaped with a hot iron to almost any line. To obtain this "true bias" turn a corner of your material over so that its lengthwise edge is parallel to the horizontal line of the underfold, as for example, when you fold a handkerchief diagonally through the centre. That diagonal line is the line upon which to cut. Crease the fold, open up your section of material and with your ruler or yardstick and a bit of chalk, mark your diagonal line. At the distance from that line desired for the width of your facing, mark for another piece of facing, and so on on each side of the diagonal line until you have the required number of pieces.

A Shower for Your Face

LITTLE needles of water, millions of them, dancing on your face. Stabbing the pores and releasing dirt, pepping up the circulation of the blood, putting you in the pink. That is what a shower for the face does.

FRANCES OLIVIER

Do try it some time.

Like this: instead of ducking your head when you take your all-over shower lift your face and let the water play upon it. Or like this: get a bath spray, turn the water on full force and hold the spray close to your face. The closer, the tinglier, and the more radiant will your skin become.

Or if you can afford the initial extravagance, you might shower-bath your face regularly with an amusing contraption specially designed for the purpose. The chief difference between this instrument and the everyday bath spray is that the former allows for a more concentrated and forceful play of water on the skin.

Now that April's here, here's a perfectly lovely thing to do to your face. Take it out for a walk some rainy day, take it out beyond the dust and the soot of the city and tilt it backward and give it a real rain bath!

The pink dewiness of Irish and English skins is generally believed to be due to the moisture, the beastly interminable rains and mists that make up English and Irish climate. A logical belief, too. Of course you have noticed how much dewier and petal-like your skin is on damp and rainy days!

And so, you see, there is much more to this shower method of treating the skin than appears on the surface. Indeed, it's a skin-deep treatment! And universally effective, excepting, perhaps, in the case of ultra-dry skin and in localities where the water is hard.

The very "drys" need not deny themselves the stimulating benefits of a face shower, however. All they need to do to protect themselves against the drying action of the water without sacrifice to the pepping action is to smooth a thin film of cream over the face before using the spray, which, of course, waterproofs the skin.

Everything will unfold just as Nature unfolds—if you will let it.

"Quit oh-geeing me, or I'll give you a spanking. You're too little, because you are."

"Oh, gee, Ma, I want to go to the talkies. 'I'm no littler than Tommy Taggart, and he's going to the talkies. Can't I go to the talkies with him?"

You and Your Child

By Irma Morris

Why

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

WHAT do you do when a child is obstinate—or lies—or is shy?

From all sides come the inquiries. What do you do for this; what can I do for that? The first and foremost thing to do is to find out why. There is always a reason for a child's behavior, and if we don't like the behavior, presto, we must remove the reason. First of all, Mr. Reason has to be caught. He isn't always yelling his name right out loud; but with persistence he can usually be found.

"My child is so disagreeable lately," a mother complained some time ago. "She's always sulking and quarreling with the other children. What shall I do?" "Find out the cause of her trouble," came the time worn advice. So Ada was first given a physical examination and was found to be O. K. Then Ada's mother had a heart-to-heart talk with her, and discovered, to her amazement, that the child was extremely unhappy. Somehow she had gotten the idea that she was ugly and unattractive, and that nobody loved her as much as they did her sisters and brother! Hence she had adopted a sulky and quarrelsome manner, which had called forth nothing but unkindness and censure, which in turn had strengthened her in her original belief. Her mother assured her that she was mistaken and forthwith took the rest of the family into her confidence. Henceforth they all treated Ada with more affection and consideration. Her classroom teacher was also consulted. Ada immediately improved, and now is on the way of becoming her sunny, normal self. How could she have been helped, however, until the cause of her misbehavior had been found? More punishment, more ostracism, more censure would simply have made her worse—unhappier—and in consequence, all the more unpleasant.

World's Window

By Pierre Van Paassen

PARIS, April.

Spoils of Office

Changes of Government, as occurred recently in France, are costly items to the taxpayer. For not only does every one of the thirty-four Ministers and Under Secretaries of the Chautemps Government, which was in office only three days, receive a full month's pay, but all of them are entitled to pensions, according to law. The Tardieu Government was overthrown on Feb. 17, the Chautemps Government came in ten days later, then Tardieu came back again. So instead of paying one set of Ministers during that month, the Treasury has to pay three sets a full month's pay, as the second Tardieu crew differed considerably from the first. To this another sinecure is added for some of them. Any man who has been Minister of Public Instruction, if only for twenty-four hours in his life, receives a free admission card to all the State-subsidized theatres, of which there are five in Paris: the Opera, the Opera Comique, the Comedie Francaise, the Odeon and the Theatre National du Trocadero. In the same way any man who has been Minister of Public Works gets a free pass for life on all the railways. One gentleman, M. Daladier, has held both offices. He was Minister of Public Instruction under M. Herriot in 1924 and Minister of Public Works under M. Chautemps in February for three days. He retains the two above named privileges for life. All the ex-Ministers are entitled to pension and they keep the title "Monsieur le Ministre" also for life. From which it will be seen that the saying that republics are ungrateful does not always hold good.

Prepares Defense

Gen. Hellebaut of the Belgian General Staff advises surrounding the fortress of Liege by a fifteen-mile ring of concrete dugouts and other "invisible" fortifications. Gens. Maglinse and Van Acker agree with him. They are in favor of reorganizing the entire defense system of the country. If their plans are accepted—and they will be—Belgium will have to follow the example of France and dig deep into its pockets and set a huge sum aside for a really up-to-date defense system. "The defense system will operate immediately upon declaration of war," said Gen. Galet. "Within a few days it will be strengthened by 'X' allied divisions." How much the "X" stands for is the secret of the French and Belgian General Staffs. In the mean time preparations are going forward. While a tremendous fuss was created in the world with the publication of secret French and Belgian plans by a Dutch newspaper last year, the very plans which that newspaper announced and which were indignantly denied by Brussels are now being carried out. In the next war Belgium is again to be the battlefield of the nations and the rampart of France. A German attack on France, as the Belgian Generals talk about, could probably not be stopped at the Belgian frontier. So Belgium will be invaded while the French get ready. It is a noble role to play, Belgium the "Savior of France" a second time. But the Flemish soldiers, who formed 80 per cent. of the army in 1914, have nothing to expect from another such sacrifice. Their culture language and entire national life are systematically being stunted and demoralized by the Prefects of France who rule in Brussels. Their interests do not count. The result is a backward, miserable people the like of which is not known in Western Europe. Yet this people produced Beethoven and Rubens and the Flemish Renaissance.

School nurse says all girls should know this

TALKING to a roomful of high school girls on personal hygiene, an experienced district nurse said: "One of the basic rules of health for girls is to keep the system functioning naturally at all times. Normal exercise and diet habits should be encouraged. But when necessary there's no harm in taking nujol, since it works mechanically and can't disturb the normal functions of any organ of the body. Particularly with girls, there are times when nujol should always be taken. Take a spoonful every night for a few days. It's a thoroughly safe and harmless method. It won't cause distress or gas pains or griping."
Nujol is different from any other substance. It contains no drugs or medicine. It can be taken safely no matter how you are feeling because it is so pure and harmless, and works so easily. Every woman should keep a bottle on hand. Every druggist has this remarkable substance. Get the genuine.

GOLDEN DAWN

by MARC O'FARRELL

Copyright 1930, Warner Bros. Pictures Inc.
This story is based on Warner Bros. Vitaphone production of the play by Otto Harbach and Oscar Hammerstein II.

SYNOPSIS

Dawn, mystery girl in the little settlement in the British East African Protectorate, is between two fires. One is from the black natives, determined that she shall become the mystic bride of the god Malunghu. The other is from Shep Keyes, feared whip-man, who holds ascendancy over black and white alike, and who has interrupted the ritual and temporarily dispersed the mob. Dawn has heard that her father was English, but she believes she is half black. The Germans, under Captain Eric, have seized the British camp: Young Tom Allen is among the prisoners of war. He overhears enough to convince him that Dawn is of pure white stock.

INSTALLMENT SIX

Another "Achtung!" arrested further petitions. The captain then gently explained that he would require some time to decide just which of the prisoners were most deserving of release.

"And do not," he concluded, "set your hearts on going, for there will be only ten, I'll name them later."

This occasioned groans of dismay among the mean and dour predictions from the chronically luckless that they were likely to remain in Africa forever. Meantime, Eric strolled over to join Tom who alone had not petitioned the German officer to include him among the ten.

"Your heart is singing Heimweh? You think of England, nicht Wahr?"

Tom was a prisoner of war

"Your Heimweh," rejoined Tom, "is my Home, Sweet Home. But the war has just begun."

It relieved Eric to have this assurance that Tom had no intention of demanding a place among the released ten. It made it easier for him to speak. "Before the war we were neighbors," he said, grasping Tom's shoulders affectionately, "and good friends, too, Tom. Is it not so?"

Tom nodded in cordial agreement. "We still are good friends, Eric—"

"That's just what I wanted to talk about, Tom," said Eric, quick to rid of himself of what he feared would be an unpleasant task. "It is my duty to keep you here, and it is your duty, as my friend, not to complain."

Eric was conscious of having phrased his speech awkwardly, and Tom, quick to appreciate his friend's position, indicated that he understood thoroughly. By this time, the other prisoners were gathering around the officer, suspicious that Tom might be gaining some extra favor. Pigeon arrived in time to overhear Eric's last remark.

"You ain't never thought I was your friend, have you, Captain?" he asked hopefully.

"I can't let the best rubber expert in Africa return to German's enemy," Eric continued to Tom, ignoring Pigeon's interruption. "I must send away the useless ones."

"What a break for you, Duke," commented a soiled prisoner to the devotee of grouse-shooting.

Pigeon was determined to press his own campaign. "Captain Eric," he said earnestly, "I ain't done a stroke of work since I was captured—so 'elp me."

Tom came to Eric's rescue. "Captain Eric will select the ten men without our help, boys," he said. "Buck up. There are worse places in the world than Africa."

That bald assertion invoked a polite but unmistakable murmur of disagreement. Napoli, with true Sicilian vehemence, announced that he doubted it. Pigeon, shocked to find that an Englishman could be guilty of such a statement, retreated in disgust and disappointment.

"Worsa place than Afric, sure," went on Napoli, "but shesa not in this worl'." His forefinger pointed downward to indicate the general direction of a place presumed to be less desirable than Africa.

Tom disagreed. "Maybe," he suggested, "those who go back won't be the lucky ones." He, too, gravely pointed downward. A couple of prisoners laughed uneasily. There was altogether too much reference to regions below. "I don't think," began one doubtfully—

"That's the stuff, Buddy," advised a saturnine American. "Don't think—an' they'll send you home."

The grumbling among the men persisted. It was harmless, but it disturbed Eric. He restated Tom's assertion that there were worse places than Africa, and invited all of them to have a drink. An amused observer of the proceedings was Blink, an American who had served as foreman on Tom's plantation. Since the release order in no manner involved him, it was all a matter of indifference to him who went home, just so the Duke was one of them. Blink rated the Duke a stratum below the natives, a depth hitherto untouched by anything human, as he estimated it.

A shrewd fellow was Blink. He was intensely devoted to Tom, both as employee and friend, and perhaps knew more about him than anybody in the settlement. He knew Tom never would take advantage of Eric's friendship to obtain passage to England, but he knew, too, that Tom would go uncomplainingly if so ordered.

"Any guy can see why Tom ain't crazy to git back to London fogs," he observed idly to a group of prisoners. Tom overheard, just as Blink had intended him to. He raised his glass in unspoken toast to Dawn, winked at Blink and sauntered off.

There came suddenly to Blink a salvo of rhetoric clothed in a faultless Piccadilly accent. Quickly translating it into the more comprehensible jargon of the jungle, he discovered that it concerned him. Duke was discussing him with Pigeon.

"I ask you, Pigeon," said the Duke, "why should an American treat an Englishman so contumaciously in Africa. After all, we are fighting together amicably in Europe, you know."

"If yer talkin' about Blinky," advised Pigeon, "don't mind 'im. 'E don't mean nothin'."

"What'd you mean—I don't mean nothin'," Blink interrupted. "I mean so much it'd take him three days to say it."

Duke sought defense in polysyllables. He managed to call Blink an "illiterate companion in calamity" before that gentleman closed in on him somewhat brusquely. Blink couldn't be certain that he had been called anything he wasn't, but he was affronted by the Duke's tone.

"Take that windshield out of your eye and listen," he invited, indicating the Duke's monocle and assuming a stance favored by Jack Dempsey. The Duke elected to keep the monocle firmly in his eye. Blink thereupon thrust his face close to Duke's and hissed. If hard consonants can be hissed, "Lay off my girl!"

This abrupt order gave the Duke something of a start. "Your girl?" he ejaculated. "Why—why you colossal imbecile, you—" Blink gathered himself for full flight, head foremost, into the Duke's midriff, but Pigeon restrained him.

"What's the good o' talkin' to 'im?" reasoned the Cockney, "when every word shows 'is 'igh-breeding." Pigeon wandered off, renouncing Duke with a sweeping gesture. But Blink was still denied a cherished punch at Duke. Tom held him back.

"Why can't you let Duke alone?" Tom asked.

"He don't show me no respect," complained Blink. "He forgets that you and I are the bosses of this gang."

"When we're on the rubber plantation we're in charge," Tom agreed, "but here we're just prisoners like the rest."

Duke emitted a triumphant snort. "Just a prisoner, blob. Get it?" Tom put an end to the squabble by counseling the Duke to keep out of Blink's path and by suggesting to Blink that he betake himself somewhere, too.

Meantime, Pigeon had gone in quest of romance. He had found among the natives an exceptionally pretty girl who had promised to meet him in the shade of the canteen. This tryst gave the Cockney immense satisfaction, as the girl had been especially favored by Shep. Pigeon felt he owed it to himself to rob the whip man of one sweetheart, anyway. He would be repaid for the public humiliation Shep had subjected him to.

The native girl was more attractively costumed than was ordinarily the case when Pigeon joined her at the appointed time and place. She explained to him that she had been selected as Dawn's maid in the temple, and was thus privileged to garb herself more fully than her sisters. Pigeon was about to utter some appropriate commentary on her radiance when the menacing shadow of Shep fell between him and the girl. The girl, with a glad cry, seized Shep in embrace.

force on the little town of Nordheim, leaving in its wake a reported death toll of about 20 persons.

The storm struck in Goliad county and after cutting a swath thru the rural section, jumped 15 miles to Nordheim where it levelled every building in its path.

The bodies of 22 Mexicans were found on farms in the territory around Nordheim.

FROST, TEXAS HIT BY GALE

HILLSBORO, Tex., May 6.—UP—A tornado ripped through Frost, Texas, near here late today and left the town and isolated community gripped in death, destruction, fire and torrential rains.

The town was cut off from the outside world. Meager details filtered from the stricken area, picturing the small city as a scene of confusion and horror.

Belated but unconfirmed reports said the probable total number of dead in Frost might not exceed a dozen or 15. First reports from two sources had estimated the fatalities between 15 and 70 dead.

Estimates of the number of dead were reduced when it was reported only nine bodies had been found at Frost while seven dead had been counted in rural sections around Maloney and Bynum.

The tornado struck both business and residential sections and in a brief movement converted Frost, usually a quite farming center, into a shamble of bodies, wrecked buildings, littered streets and sudden fires which threatened to consume parts of the town.

Reports later tonight said the fire threatened to sweep the stricken town.

The fight progressed merrilly to middle of the street where police finally intervened.

SCHOOL GIRL KILLED IN CRASH

afternoon, three in front and the others in the rumble seat. According to police, they went along the Great Highway and then onto the Skyline Boulevard, reaching the road leading into Colma in about half an hour.

Upon reaching the intersection, Tompkins is said to have pulled to one side to let another car go by. The gravel on the roadbed swung his car halfway around, and the impetus too great, he was unable to right the light roadster.

The car turned over three or four times, throwing everyone in the clear but Miss Siems.

When passing motorists rushed to the rescue and dragged the car from her body, she was dead.

Road Blamed

Miss McManus said she was pitched headlong through the wind shield. She blamed the accident on a combination of the loose gravel and a stiff wind which was blowing, declaring that when Tompkins attempted to right the car, the gale seemed to blow it over.

The McManus Holm and Thomson girls, together with the body of Miss Siem, were hurried to the Colma Sanitarium.

Finding the accommodations there insufficient, the injured girls and the body of Miss Siem were taken to the South San Francisco hospital.

Tompkins righted the machine and drove Miss Lane to her home. Arriving at his own residence, he refused to discuss the accident upon the advice of his mother.
